

Adult Attachment Profile Mini-Questionnaire

Instructions: When completing this questionnaire, please focus on one significant relationship – This does not necessarily need to be a romantic relationship but must be the individual with whom you feel the most connection. Who is your primary “go to” person if you’re sick, in trouble, want to celebrate, call with news... Please highlight, circle, or comment on any statements that are particularly relevant to you. When responding, consider how strongly you identify with each statement. Using the scale below, place a cross in the space provided. PLEASE UNDERSTAND THAT THIS IS A SCREENING TOOL.

Secure

Disagree Sometimes Agree Mostly Agree Strongly Agree

0 1 2 3

1.	I feel relaxed with my significant other most of the time.
2.	I find it easy to flow between being close and connected with my significant other to being on my own.
3.	If my significant other and I hit a glitch, it is relatively easy for me to apologize, brainstorm a win-win solution, or repair the misattunement.
4.	People are essentially good at heart.
5.	It is a priority to keep agreements with my significant other.
6.	I attempt to discover and meet the needs of my significant other whenever possible and I feel comfortable expressing my own needs.
7.	I actively protect my significant other from others and from harm and attempt to maintain safety in our connection.
8.	I look at my significant other with kindness and caring and look forward to our time together.
9.	I am comfortable being affectionate or showing my feelings with others
10.	I can keep secrets, protect other's privacy, and respect boundaries.
Section Total

Avoidant / Dismissive

Disagree Sometimes Agree Mostly Agree Strongly Agree

0 1 2 3

1.	When my significant other arrives home or approaches me, I feel inexplicably stressed – especially when they want to connect.
2.	I find myself minimizing the importance of close relationships in my life.
3.	I insist on self-reliance; I have difficulty reaching out when I need help, and I do many of life's tasks or my hobbies, alone.
4.	I sometimes feel superior in not needing others and wish others were more self-sufficient.
5.	I feel like my significant other is always there but would often prefer to have my own space unless I invite the connection.
6.	Sometimes I prefer casual sex instead of a committed relationship.
7.	I usually prefer relationships with things or animals instead of people.
8.	I often find eye contact uncomfortable and particularly difficult to maintain.
9.	It is easier for me to think things through than to express myself emotionally.
10.	When I lose a relationship, at first I might experience separation elation and then become depressed.
Section Total

Anxious / Ambivalent

Disagree Sometimes Agree Mostly Agree Strongly Agree

0 1 2 3

1.	I am always yearning for something or someone that I feel I cannot have and rarely feeling satisfied.
2.	Sometimes, I over-function, over-adapt, over-accommodate others, or over-apologize for things I didn't do, in an attempt to stabilize connection.
3.	Over-focusing on others, I tend to lose myself in relationships.
4.	It is difficult for me to say NO or to set realistic boundaries.
5.	I chronically second-guess myself and sometimes wish I had said something differently.
6.	When I give more than I get, I often resent this and harbor a grudge. It is often difficult to receive love from another when they express it.
7.	It is difficult for me to be alone. If alone, I feel stressed, abandoned, hurt, and/or angry.
8.	At the same time as I feel a deep wish to be close with my significant other. I also have a paralyzing fear of losing the connection.
9.	I want to be close but feel angry at my significant other at the same time. After anxiously awaiting their arrival, I end up picking fights.
10.	I often tend to “merge” or lose myself in my significant other and feel what they feel, or want what they want.
Section Total

Disorganized / Disoriented

Disagree Sometimes Agree Mostly Agree Strongly Agree

0 1 2 3

1.	When I reach a certain level of intimacy with another, I sometimes experience inexplicable fear.
2.	When presented with problems, I often feel stumped and feel they are irresolvable.
3.	I have an exaggerated startle response when others approach me unexpectedly.
4.	Others often comment or complain that I am controlling.
5.	I often expect the worst to happen in my relationships.
6.	Protection often feels out of reach. I struggle to feel safe with another.
7.	I have a hard time remembering and discussing the feelings related to my past attachment situations. I disconnect, dissociate, or get confused.
8.	Stuck in approach-avoidance patterns with others, I want closeness but am also afraid of the one I desire to be close with.
9.	My instinctive, active self-protective responses are often unavailable when possible danger is present – leaving me feeling immobilized, disconnected, or “gone”.
10.	Because I am easily confused or disoriented, especially when stressed, it is important for my partner to keep arrangements simple and clear.
Section Total					